April 12th 2010: "Haiti - The Present Conditions on the Ground - A Journalist's Report"

Andy Levin joins David Gibbons in this profound program on Haiti, a country in which he has spent many years covering the affairs of a torn nation as a writer and photographer. In recent articles he quotes "Some twenty of the estimated three hundred camps are in grave danger from flood waters as they are located on or at the bottom of steep hills. The danger is greatest is said to be "red" camps, a UN designation for those camps most at risk for flooding. The largest of the "red" camps is the so-called "golf course" camp, formerly secured by the American 86th Airborne, on the grounds of the Pet
