May 2nd 2013: Fine Tune Your Communication to Increase Sales, Decrease Workplace Conflict, Retain the Best, and Drive Accountability

Deanne takes the microphone herself to discuss the all-important issue of communications for building successful relationships not only in your business life with clients, colleagues and employees, but also in your personal life. Although there are many different personality types, communication style boils down to four major behavioral approaches. These were first identified two thousand years ago by Hippocrates and popularized in the modern age by Harvard-trained psychologist Dr. William Marston. Deanne will be addressing how to fine tune your communication to address key workplace issues, s

Deanne DeMarco

Deanne DeMarco Deanne's career has revolved around helping people break through boundaries and career roadblocks. She has a strong business background with expertise in medicine, educations and utilities. As a medical scientist she was on the original three-member team that first discovered the cancer link to second-hand smoke (published in theLancet). As a corporate trainer her management coaching program won national recognition from Training Magazines Top 100. For more than 20 years she has helped managers and individuals advance their careers. Today, she continues her work as an executive and individual coach, she conducts fun, interactive workshops and seminars. And is a keynote speak
