"Thrive", the documentary movie, was created as a necessity for the increasing disparity in the distribution of wealth and the overt decimation of the Earth's natural resources. Foster Gamble, from the Proctor and Gamble fortune, and his wife Kimberly, lived a life of privilege and yet they began having ephiphanies that made them question why things were so maldistributed upon our planet. They came to the ultimate realization that the existing banking system based on nothing of inherent value and yet charging exorbitant interest charges, monopolistic corporations selling inferior and polluting

Kimberly Gamble

Kimberly Gamble worked as a journalist for Newsweek International for several decades and is currently CEO of Clear Compass Media. She is the grand daughter of a suffragette and was imbued with a personal sense of the important role of woman in ushering transformative global change. Kimberly is co-writer, co-producer and director of the "Thrive" movie which has had millions of viewers in 22 languages throughout the globe. During the making of Thrive, it became clear to Kimberly the myriad of problems facing humanity but also that there were clear and effective solutions to all of these that could usher humanity into a "Golden Age". In only six months after the release of "Thrive", 700 thrive
