November 4th 2013: Jobs for Americans with Disabilities

Jennifer Laszlo Mizrahi is the President of RespectAbilityUSA.org, a non-profit organization working to reshape the attitudes of society so that people with disabilities can more fully participate in and contribute to society. She talks about her life and experience of family caregiving, and about RespectAbility USA and her work with it. She highlights the challenges encountered by people of all ages with disabilities associated with physical and mental health conditions in getting their abilities recognized so they can get jobs. She explains ways in which various of the challenges are overcom
