It's an honor just to be nominated, but most people still want to win. This year, 32 performers are nominated in the acting categories. And, barring any ties, only seven will win. But what exactly are Emmy voters looking for when they cast their votes? Do voters consider just the submitted episode (as they're instructed to do), or do they consider other factors, such as previous material and personal matters? This year, Soaps In Depth's executive editor Richard Simms and soapcentral.com's Dan J Kroll take a look at who might win an Emmy statuette from two different viewpoints. Dan weighs hi
